

Problem Statement:

Develop a Python program to analyze the selling price of used cars based on various factors such as mileage, age, brand, and condition. Utilize statistical methods and machine learning techniques to predict the optimal selling price for a given set of features. The program should include data preprocessing, feature selection, model training, and evaluation to provide insights into the pricing dynamics of the used car market.